MANRESA ROAD, LONDON, SW3

New Block Management Instruction

Lornham has been appointed to manage a building on Manresa Road, Chelsea, London.

Formerly known as the Chelsea College of Science and Technology, this majestic 19th-century building comprising of three stories, and 15 units was originally designed as a block of purpose-built artists' studios, built-in 1878 by John Brass. Today Manresa Road is considered one of the most desirable in London.

Rupert Wertheimer, Lornham Director comments:

We are delighted to be managing this building, which is steeped in a rich history of the arts yet incredibly fitting for life today and modern living. Our relationships in Chelsea are of utmost importance to Lornham and we continue to see growth within this enclave of Prime Central London."
